Rev. 11/2011
Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act prohibits discrimination against individuals with disabilities in programs or activities of public entities. This section has been interpreted to include individuals with a record of a disability or those perceived as having a disability. The United States Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has issued regulations implementing Section 504, which prohibit discrimination against individuals with disabilities in programs or activities receiving Federal financial assistance.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) was enacted in 1990. The ADA is a comprehensive civil rights law that outlaws discrimination against individuals with disabilities in all areas of public life, including jobs, schools, transportation, and access to public facilities. The ADA prohibits discrimination against individuals with disabilities in all areas of public life, including jobs, schools, transportation, and access to public facilities.

The ADA Amendments Act of 2008 (ADAAA) further clarified and strengthened the definition of disability by clarifying that an individual qualifies as disabled if he or she has a record of a disability or is regarded as having a disability.

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) are critical tools for ensuring equal access and opportunities for individuals with disabilities. The OCR is responsible for enforcing these laws and ensuring compliance with their requirements.

Section 504 and the ADA are designed to ensure that individuals with disabilities have equal access to educational, employment, and other opportunities. These laws prohibit discrimination against individuals with disabilities in all areas of public life, including jobs, schools, transportation, and access to public facilities. The OCR is responsible for enforcing these laws and ensuring compliance with their requirements.
