

Bio submitted by Denver Board of Education Member Jennifer Bacon:

As a classroom teacher, school administrator, lawyer and parent advocate, Jennifer has committed her career to advancing opportunities through education. Whether through serving as the board chair of a parent organizing group Padres y Jovenes Unidos, facilitating “Know Your Rights” trainings for students or developing educators on how to engage and make change civically, Jennifer lives out her belief that the best decisions are those made by those most impacted. From a young age, Jennifer’s family instilled in her the belief that education is freedom, and set her on a path to earn a law degree from the College of William & Mary, a master’s degree in education from Florida International University and a bachelor’s degree in business management from Tulane University. Jennifer is proud to have been elected in November 2017 to represent District 4.
